How to Find Fraud Faster and Reduce Losses by 44%

According to the 2012 Report to the Nations, organizations with a Certified Fraud Examiner (CFE) on staff experienced frauds that were 44 percent less costly, based on median loss, and found that these frauds lasted half as long as organizations that did not have a CFE on staff during the fraud’s occurrence.

CFEs bring a special skill set to a fraud examination. With training in four broad areas — financial transactions and fraud schemes, law, investigation and fraud prevention and deterrence — the CFE is a well-rounded, highly skilled fraud fighter.

Whether it’s CFE Exam preparation (pg. 4-5), high-quality Continuing Professional Education for CFEs (pgs. 10-19) or professional publications (pgs. 20-26), the ACFE offers training and resources to help you develop your skills, find fraud faster and reduce fraud losses.

What’s one of the fastest ways to reduce fraud in an organization? Internal controls. According to the 2012 Report to the Nations, a lack of internal controls is cited as the number one factor contributing to fraud in an organization.

Understanding and implementing an effective internal controls system is critical to fraud prevention. These products explore the intricacies of internal controls and help provide an immediate impact on your anti-fraud efforts.

Fraud-Related Internal Controls

CPE Credit: 16  |  Course Level: Intermediate
Prerequisite: Basic knowledge of financial transactions and accounting systems

Much of occupational fraud and abuse can be prevented by implementing key internal controls. Additionally, fraud-related internal controls are a key component of compliance with regulatory and legislative requirements, such as the Sarbanes-Oxley Act and AU 316 — Consideration of Fraud in a Financial Statement Audit. This self-study course is perfect for anyone who needs to know the details of a strong fraud deterrence initiative.

Financial statement fraud occurs when an employee intentionally causes a misstatement or omission of material information in an organization’s financial reports. Although it is not the most common type of fraud, it is one of the most costly. The 2012 Report to the Nations reported that the median loss of financial statement fraud schemes was $1 million.

In an environment where businesses are fighting to stay alive, there aren’t many that can withstand this type of loss. You must be diligent in protecting your organization from financial statement fraud. The following resources will assist you in detecting and preventing this costly scheme.

Introduction to Financial Statement Fraud

CPE Credit: 2  |  Course Level: Basic  |  Prerequisite: None

This self-study course presents an introduction to the most common schemes used to manipulate an organization’s financial statements. Each section of the course includes a description and example of the scheme, how the scheme is perpetrated and common red flags. The course concludes with a discussion of common techniques used to uncover financial statement manipulation.

Inside the Fraudster’s Mind

Understanding the thoughts and feelings of a fraudster can provide valuable insight to enhance an organization’s anti-fraud efforts. Knowing why fraudsters commit their crimes can help you learn how to prevent fraud by addressing the circumstances that lead to it. Gaining insight into the way perpetrators rationalize their actions can also help you deter others from forming similar rationalizations in the future. And possessing an understanding of the human element of fraud might give you an edge in gaining an admission during an interview.

You Will Learn How To:

- Analyze the psychology of human behavior
- Compare the categories of perpetrators and how they are correlated to the reasons perpetrators commit crimes
- Identify common motivations for committing fraud
- Categorize ten common critical thinking errors associated with ethical behavior
- Recognize popular rationalizations for committing fraud
- Illustrate ways organizations can use this information as an important piece of the fraud-prevention-and-detection puzzle

The course was interesting and even after over 30 years as an investigator I gained some new insights.”
— Nina Blemmer

“Your self-study courses offer a very cost-effective way to learn new topics and expand one’s skill as a CFE. I love the flexibility to study on my own time. With kids, work, home responsibilities, etc., that option is perfect.”

Written Statement Analysis

CPE Credit: 2
Course Level: Overview
Prerequisite: None

Written statement analysis is the process of detecting deception by evaluating the contents of a documented statement. The underlying concept of written statement analysis emphasizes that a deceptive person describes events from their imagination, rather than memory, and is therefore likely to manifest their dishonesty in recognizable patterns of speech and word selection. Because of this, written statements can play a key part in evaluating deception during a fraud examination.

This course will teach you to understand how every word plays a part in a statement and identify signs of fabrication that could be staring back at you from the written page.

You Will Learn How To:
- Analyze word choice and sentence structure to discern deception
- Recognize the potential implications of changes in voice and tense
- Interpret the possible motivations behind a subject’s use of semantics

- Employ advanced search features of Google and Bing search engines
- Use nontraditional methods for finding information on the Internet, including social networking sites like Facebook and LinkedIn
- Find foreign corporate records online
- Use data-mining tools and techniques
- Identify the legal issues affecting computer investigations
- Conduct the collection of digital evidence and electronic evidence discovery
- Investigate with the Internet using websites, emails, newsgroups, chat rooms and screen names
- Investigate using public records
- Access information through computer databases and data analysis tools
- Retrieve information from a target computer

Data Analysis Techniques for Fraud Examiners

Course Level: Overview
Prerequisite: None

This course will introduce you to the basics of using data analysis to uncover fraud. You will work through several interactive examples to illustrate simple analysis techniques. With these examples, you will learn how to perform a variety of tests and interpret the results to identify common red flags of fraud.

You Will Learn How To:
- Describe the four phases of the data analysis process and why it is important to have a formal process
- Identify common red flags that appear in fraudulent data
- Select the appropriate data analysis tools for a particular investigation
- List fundamental data analysis techniques that can be applied to almost any investigation
- Determine data analysis techniques to use depending on the type of fraud scheme under investigation
- Evaluate unstructured data, such as text, for signs of fraud
It was clearly written, very helpful and included many real case studies. All the information included in the material was presented in a concise and methodological way.”
